

Jeff Hosking

Criminal Justice Instructor
Assistant Dean – Teaching Learning Center
Central Wyoming College
Riverton, Wyoming

Biography: Dr. 'J' is the Criminal Justice Instructor and Assistant Dean of the Teaching Learning Center at Central Wyoming College in Riverton, Wyoming. He spent many years as an investigator. As such, he has used science to determine identities of criminal perpetrators. These processes involved chemistry, criminology, mathematics, computer technology, and biology.

Workshop: Classification and Identification of Fingerprints – This workshop will provide instruction on fingerprints and their identification. Students will be instructed in the importance of fingerprints in detection of criminal perpetrators. The general patterns of fingerprints will also be discussed. Students will have the opportunity to closely examine fingerprints to get a feel of how they are used for detection purposes. It is anticipated that each student will be able to examine their own fingerprints with an eye toward identification.